The 45 day (or 90 day) holding period rule and the dividend washing integrity rule, may apply to deny franking credits available to investors. These amounts have been separately reported above for further information. The methodology applied may not be correct where the investor has participated in any share buyback during the tax year. In addition, for Australian resident individual investors, these rules may not apply where an investor's franking credit entitlement is less than or equal to $5,000. We recommend investors seek independent taxation advice specific to their individual circumstances. For more detail about denied franking credits, please refer to the Tax Guide.
