Romance Scams

Online dating scams are once again on the rise, with scammers targeting victims through legitimate dating apps, websites and social media. Scammers target victims by posing as romantic interests with the intention of requesting money, gifts or banking/credit card information. Be wary of people claiming to be from Australia but working overseas or travelling, expressing strong emotions over a short period of time, subtle or direct requests for money or gifts and playing on emotional triggers to build trust or empathy. Money lost to scammers in most cases is impossible to recover and can pose a risk to personal data and information as they are often linked to money laundering activities.

Remote Access Scams

Be on the lookout for scammers attempting to gain personal information by posing as well-known organisations in telecommunications, retail and IT support industries. Scammers will claim you have an issue with your account, internet or computer which can be solved by remotely accessing your device. Never give an unsolicited caller remote access to your device by clicking on a pop-up or downloading an application, even if they appear professional or knowledgeable. Do not provide personal, credit card or online account details over the phone unless you made the call from a trusted source.
